PECULIAR DIVORCE SUIT

ectiont Court to Decide What Con titutes a Marriage Among Jews in Russia. HARTFORD, June 13 .- Judge Hall of the Superior Court, now in session in this city, has a peculiar question to settle in a divorce suit.
The question is. "What constitutes a marriage among Jews in Russia?" A witness testified this morning that three things are necessary: First, that the husband pay the bride's parents a specified sum of money; second, that he give a certificate agreeing to set aside so much property to provide for her support after his death; and third, that he assume the marriage license. None of these necessary ceremonies were performed when Isaac Gilck and Rachel were performed when Isaac Gilck and Rachel Estry were married, except that he raid her parents a certain sum, a part of which they runned over to their daughter, who with Isaac left Russia the morning after the ceremony had been performed, which consisted of his putting a wedding ring on her finger.

They sailed for America, she as a secondclass, and he as a steerage passenger. On landing in New York he beseeched her to live with him but sherefused, saying that the ceremony was not a binding one, and that she was not his wife. They came to have Britain, and she optained employment in the rule shon, Isaac met one Leon, a Russian, whom he saked to urge Rachel to live with him, and thus Leon became acquainted with the fair Rachel. Leon was convinced that no marriage ceremony had been performed, and so told Glick, who soon afterward left New Britain and has not been seen since. In the mean time Leon fell deeply in love with Rachesl, and a few years ago they were married.
Recently, owing to certain circumstances, it was deemed advisable to determine whether they were isgaily man and wife, and Rachel decided to sue for a divorce from Isaac on the ground of desertion, so that in case she was his legal wife, she could be separated from him and then remarry the man she loved. This was done, and Judge Hall's decision will be swaited with deep interest by all concerned.
